

College Board: Clearing a Path for All Students to Own Their Future

Schools and districts are committed to preparing students for life after high school. We share that mission.

A not-for-profit organization, College Board has spent more than a century developing programs that serve students, families, and the more than 6,000 colleges and high schools that make up our membership.

What Sets College Board Apart

Our student-focused portfolio of solutions—Advanced Placement®, the SAT® Suite of Assessments, and BigFuture®—span instructional, assessment, and future-planning needs.

Together, they build and measure the skills essential for success in—and after—high school.

Backed by research and trusted for their proven results, College Board programs provide educators with actionable insights to identify student potential, personalize instruction, measure progress, and inform decision making.

College Board continuously invests in, evolves, and enhances our offerings to ensure they meet the full set of postsecondary pathways, including workforce, military, and two- and four-year colleges.
